This is a shortened list of courses offered in Fall Quarter 2017 for which prospective students have been granted permission to sit in by the department chairs or school deans. The list below includes 100-, 200-, and 300-level classes. 100-level courses are introductory, while 300-level courses are more advanced and specific. (While only the classes below have been approved for visitors, Northwestern's complete course offerings, as well as possible updates to locations, can be found online at http://www.registrar.northwestern.edu/courses/index.html#undergraduate_catalog.) Please note that some classes require you to contact professors 24 hours beforehand. Professors’ contact information is given for the departments that have provided it.

It is a good idea to arrive at least five minutes early and introduce yourself to the professor so that he/she is aware that you are a visitor in the class. Please plan to stay for the entire class period. Professors are able to turn away visitors at their own discretion, so we ask that you please comply.

Please note: All class information is subject to change. For updated listings, check with the individual department prior to attending classes. Classes are also subject to cancellation, could be closed due to examination, or could have other reasons to turn visitors away, so we recommend having multiple classes in mind.

Please note: All class information is subject to change. For updated listings, check with the individual department prior to attending classes. Classes are also subject to cancellation, could be closed due to examination, or could have another reason to turn visitors away.
