Open minds

At Northwestern, we believe that diversity—of background, identity, belief, interest, expertise—is essential to undergraduate learning and to a healthy society. We also believe in convening a community of open-minded individuals who are eager to benefit from and contribute to the world of perspectives represented on campus.

“Our students come into the classroom ready to be challenged. I revel in the opportunity to engage with them about complicated subjects—and to see them grow.”

Thomas Bradshaw, professor of radio/TV/film

*Our reporting method tracks students who identify as multiple races/ethnicities in each category, so the numbers will exceed 100%. Over 18% of our first-year class indicated two or more races/ethnicities.

“ I was nervous about my ability to find a place within Northwestern. I had always struggled to find my people, even in a small school, and it surprised me just how willing everyone was to accept the loud inner-city kid with a billion crazy ideas and mannerisms.”

Open campus

Northwestern's excellence across disciplines and extraordinary breadth of resources draw students and scholars from around the world. To make the most of our multidimensional community, the University strives to cultivate inclusive learning environments, cultural exchange, and opportunities for dialogue through intentional engagement with difference—different individuals, different identities, and different ideas.

This leads to an open, collaborative, and supportive campus where students grow and knowledge thrives.

Many doors will be open to you.

Northwestern students find support and counsel across campus, whether from academic and peer advisers, faculty mentors, or staff members.

Academic Support and Learning Advancement offers tutoring and facilitated study groups for more than 30 courses as well as individual and group academic coaching, individual consultations, and other programs that help students successfully navigate their academic paths at Northwestern.

“ I want to be able to lead the classical music industry to be more inclusive and more reflective of a changing world shaped by globalization. This is why my multifaceted education is important—by understanding economics and the greater social sciences, I’ll be able to facilitate smarter ways to bring about change in classical music.”

Open minds, many directions

“As a first-generation college student coming from an urban public high school, I struggled to adjust here, but mentorship programs, relationships with faculty, and academic support helped me succeed in my first year. Now, as an Arch Scholars mentor for first-year students, I share my own successes and failures so they can learn through my experience.”

Diana Velazquez '21 is an environmental science major and a QuestBridge Scholar. She is pursuing a minor in chemistry and a certificate in sustainability and energy.

“I studied chemistry in French throughout high school, so in office hours with my Northwestern chemistry professor I would start bursting out in French, especially when naming the elements. Then my professor started explaining in French! I’ve been impressed by how much the professors actually want students to succeed.”

Deogratias Mukuralinda '22, a Bridge2Rwanda Scholar, is majoring in industrial engineering and working toward a certificate in integrated marketing communications.

“I was a DJ at WNUR, the University’s independent radio station. Getting involved at WNUR made my transition to college life smoother; I found a group of people with common interests and common aspirations—people I found easy to socialize with and really bonded with.”

Dimitris Gkoulimaris '20, who grew up in Greece, completed his major in music composition and popular music studies. His minors were critical theory, sociology, and music technology.

“In high school, I always had trouble finding my place. In most of my classes, I was the only black student and low-income student and felt like I had to force myself to fit in. I was nervous about this when I came to Northwestern. But luckily for me, I have been able to find people I can relate to here.”

Cayla Clements '21 is a QuestBridge Scholar. A journalism major and global health studies minor, she participated in an immersion program at Northwestern's campus in Qatar.

“During my first year here, I worked as a research assistant. I received great exposure to what research looks like in communication studies and the various passions I could pursue through research. I also learned important skills that I can apply in other disciplines.”

Shenali Perera '20 grew up in India. A communication studies major, she minored in business institutions and completed an integrated marketing communications certificate. She was a residential assistant and a member of the Fusion Dance Company.

“My passion for entrepreneurship has drawn me to the Garage, where I am part of the artist in residence program. It allows me to write and share my work with like-minded artistic students in a space where others are working on startups and projects of their own. It's exciting to see the things I enjoy manifest in the same space.”

Mark Settles '21 is majoring in learning and organizational change and pursuing a minor in entrepreneurship and the Segal Design Certificate. He is a QuestBridge Scholar.

Open community

Northwestern students are engaged in far more than their studies. Experiences outside the classroom abound, whether you're participating in one of roughly 500 student groups, getting involved in the Evanston community, or engaging with the city of Chicago—a metropolis of nearly 3 million that neighbors us to the south along Lake Michigan.

How can we make the world better?

If you find yourself asking this question often—and acting on the answers you come up with—you have a lot in common with students at Northwestern. Here are some of the ways our undergraduates pursue community service, social justice, and civic engagement.

Center for Civic Engagement

programs include Engage Chicago, a summer field study program; the NU Public Interest Program, a yearlong public service fellowship; NU Votes, a nonpartisan voter registration effort; and Jumpstart, an early-childhood education program.

Open city

To our students, Chicago is more than a major US metropolis.

At once a patchwork of vital and culturally distinct neighborhoods, the cradle of modern architecture, a bastion of the blues and improv comedy, a hotbed of history, and so much more, this city ranks among Northwestern's greatest teachers.

Northwestern may be highly selective, but we make it simple for you to apply and make it possible for students of all backgrounds to afford an education here.

Our admissions process is holistic. Before making an admissions decision, we consider your whole story—not just test scores and grades. We get to know your hometown, high school, and family circumstances, and we look to see that you’ve made the most of the opportunities available to you.

Financial aid facts

- Northwestern's need-blind admissions committee evaluates applications without regard to whether students can afford tuition.
- Northwestern offers loan-free financial aid packages so our students graduate with little to no debt.
- Northwestern students who qualify for financial aid their first year will receive similar aid throughout college, provided they reapply for aid each year with comparable family circumstances.
- Northwestern offers fee waivers to students for whom the application fee poses a hardship.
- Our online calculators can give you a sense of how affordable Northwestern may be for your family. Visit admissions.northwestern.edu/tuition-aid/estimating-domestic-aid.html.

“The spirit of inclusion and the celebration of diversity I see and encourage on our campus are truly hopeful signs.”

Morton Schapiro
President and Professor

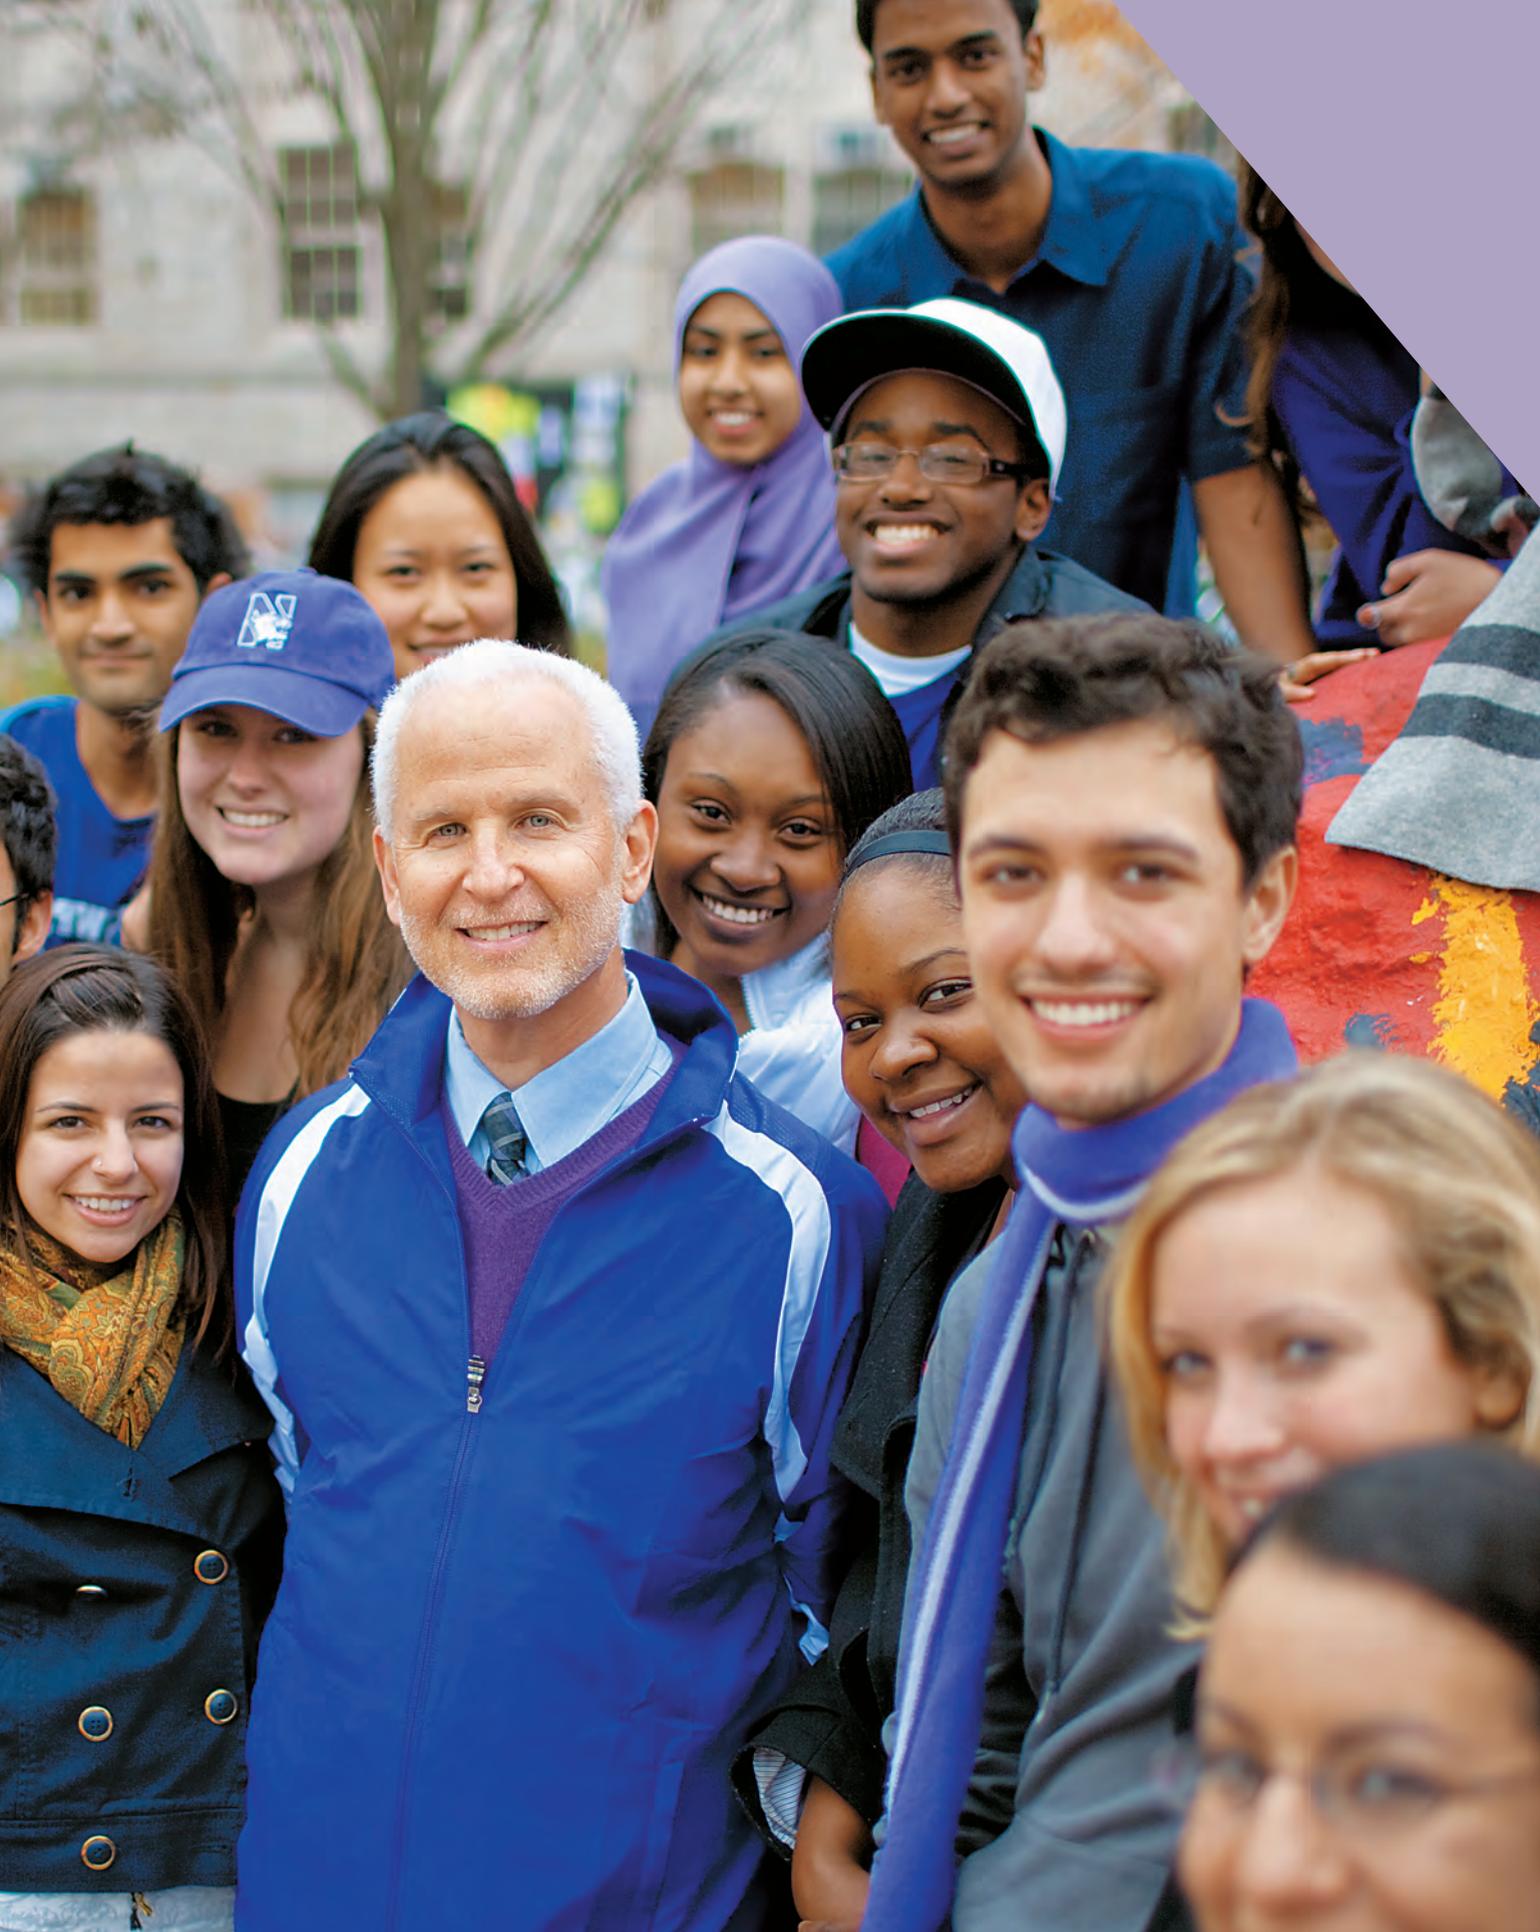

Congratulations on your academic achievements, and thank you for your interest in Northwestern. As you think about your next stage in life, I urge you to consider what sort of world you hope to live in and, more immediately, what sort of university community you would like to join.

Those two questions are deeply intertwined. The world you create in college often shapes your larger world after graduation. Northwestern is a place of great beginnings, regardless of your chosen field. The spirit of inclusion and the celebration of diversity I see and encourage on our campus are truly hopeful signs.

I am confident that we—Northwestern and society at large—are in the process of making history. We have a ways to go before all our institutions can be considered truly inclusive, but the students I meet here care more about inclusion, sustainability, and social justice than did my own or other generations. I can't wait to see what all of you will do with your lives and how you will change the world.

I hope you will consider joining us at Northwestern.
